Manager Support Training for Healthcare Organisations

Many organisations face challenges in promoting the ownership of risk management amongst senior staff and embedding this within the culture and day to day running of the organisation. The development and implementation of risk management systems is no longer the sole responsibility of risk managers with specialists from other disciplines such as HR, training and medical devices now involved.

DNV offer manager support training to NHSLA scheme members, providing extra guidance beyond the current scope offered within the scheme. This service assists in engaging relevant staff and spreading ownership of risk management through all levels of the organisation.

The training is aimed at those staff who are new to the NHSLA standards and need to develop a greater understanding of the standards and the assessment process.

It is important to note that completing Manager Support Training does not guarantee success at assessment.

Each course aims to provide delegates with a greater understanding of the principles of successful risk management and specific guidance in relation to:

- NHSLA's role and function
- NHSLA and CNST Standards
- Assessment process
- Gap analysis and the development of action plans
- Choosing a level for assessment
- Engaging the board
- Continual improvement

For each two day training course a competitive fixed fee of £1590 plus VAT and expenses will be charged. All training will be delivered by the assessment team.
